

Courses to be taken by Law with Law Studies in Europe students during year abroad

Law with French Law

Université Panthéon-Assas (Paris II)

In Each Semester

Fundamental Courses: Droit constitutionnel (with written exam and travaux dirigés)
Droit civil (les obligations) (with written exam and travaux dirigés)

Supplementary Courses: Three law courses chosen from subjects of the first year, second year or third year Licence, or Master 1

In addition, students will take supplementary courses in droit constitutionnel and droit civil which are designed to give support in learning the techniques required for the study of (and examination in) these subjects.

Students who have applied for admission to the programme for the third year of the Licence, and who are admitted by Paris II to that programme, will take the regular courses for the Licence within the regulations at Paris II (and are free to make any choices of subjects, including the choice of subjects to take for the travaux dirigés, within the regulations for the Licence 3 at Paris).

at least one other course of at least 2.5 ECTS credits

During the year, students must:

- (a) pass two Klausuren (written examinations) in either public or private law. The Munich curriculum offers “Probeklausuren” (exercise or mock exams) at the end of the first semester and “Grundkurs-Schein-Klausuren” and “Zwischenprüfungsklausuren” in the second semester. While it is advised that you take as many Klausuren as possible, you need to pass at least two – one of which may be a Probeklausur. If you fail in any of the Klausuren, there is a “Wiederholungsklausur” of the Zwischenprüfung which is the final opportunity to pass the Klausur.

AND

- (b) EITHER
- (i) write a seminar paper (Seminararbeit). Students must take a seminar as one of your optional courses in order to do this,
- OR*
- (ii) write the Hausarbeit in at least one of these courses (Grundkurs Zivilrecht or Grundkurs Öffentliches Recht).

Law with European Law

University of Leiden

In each semester courses may be chosen from amongst the Leiden Law Courses subject only to the following restrictions:

- (1) The total ECTS credit value of the courses chosen across the two semesters must amount to a minimum of 60 points. Students are strongly advised to take courses in each semester that deliver a total ECTS credit value of a minimum of 30 points, although requests to take an imbalanced load (e.g. only 25 points in one semester) will be considered.
- (2) Students must take one of the basic courses on EU Law, and preferably in the first semester, in order to give a grounding in EU law which will be useful for the whole year's courses.
- (3) Students may not take any course which is solely concerned with English Law. However, comparative law courses which include elements of English law may be taken.
- (4) No more than a total of 15 ECTS credits may be courses which do not involve substantial study of subjects within one or more of the fields of European law, public or private international law, or Dutch law. This means that courses in ancient law (e.g. Ancient Egyptian Law), or non-European legal systems (e.g. Islamic law; Law and Governance in Africa, Law and Governance in Indonesia), or in areas of law which have no significant European or international dimension (e.g. Criminalistics; Law and Culture), or in Economics or Management rather than law (e.g. Trade and Finance in the Global Economy; Business and Entrepreneurship), may be taken but only within this 15 ECTS credit limit.

Optional Courses

The compulsory courses, set out above, together comprise 33 ECTS credits. Students should therefore choose other courses taught either in Spanish or Catalan giving together at least 27 ECTS credits. (Exceptionally, and with the permission of both Professor Capdeferro and Professor Prassl, one optional course exclusively taught in English may be available (except for Introduction to Common Law, of course). Commonly both UPF and international students take around 20-22 ECTS credits per term. Taking an extra module during the year (giving a total of up to 65 ECTS credits overall) may give students a buffer against failing or dropping another module.
